Three, Two, One Liftoff

Charles Albert Meteorite and Mineral Jewelry

Major Tom to Ground Control: Got a problem here. You wish upon shooting stars for a soul mate, have astrologists map your career moves, and seek balance through texted tarot readings. Think maybe it's all just a bag of rocks?

Charles Albert to Major Tom: Try putting your marbles into something with a little more clarity. And start with the right jewelry. I scour the planet for fossils, minerals, gemstones, and meteorites with various metaphysical properties.

Looking for love? Larimar necklace charms might channel Cupid. Need a sunnier outlook? Citrine star rings transform the negative. Try agate drusy for a dose of strength. Everything is set in some of the finest silver in the solar system.

Ground Control: Cowboy, looks like you've scored a ticket to the moon.

Available at Tracy Ewell Cosmetics & Skincare, 775 Lake Avenue, Inman Park (404-588-9151).

Paradise Found

NuMe Natural Soap

The last oils you rubbed on your skin were of the Hawaiian Tropic variety. There were top notes of artificial coconut.

Alas, no exotic beach locale was involved.

Deanna Sellers, creator of essential oil-based NuMe soaps, slathers on only the good stuff.

Sellers is one part chemist (who knew it was so scientific to make soap?), one part hippie (she started making bars for her kids' sensitive skin), and one part fragrance tailor (take her four ounces of an essential oil, and she'll create a few dozen bars of your signature scent).

She mixes and stamps batches in her Woodstock kitchen. Our favorite scents are rosemary eucalyptus, lavender vanilla, and honey almond.

Your own lathered paradise. No passport required.

NuMe Natural Soap (770-366-0793 or numenaturalsoap.com). Available at The Broadwell Cottage, 765 Mid Broadwell Road, Milton (770-777-0444); Davonshire Home and Garden, 1430 Dresden Drive, suite 200, Brookhaven (404-437-7826).

Where the Sidewalk Ends

Holli Richey's Whole Idea Plant Walks

*What the #&*% is that?
Did we learn in Daisies
that this leaf is edible?
Ohmigod it's alive. Get it off me!*

You've always wanted to love the great outdoors.
They just scare and confuse
the bejesus out of you.

Holli Richey will help you earn that nature badge yet.

The clinical herbalist and Georgia native bases her Whole Idea plant walks on simple plant education and the joy of rediscovering your own backyard.

On tours of neighborhoods and city parks, Richey points out medicinal and edible plants (yellow root, goldenrod, and passion flower vine are a few of Georgia's abundant, natural healers) to get people to appreciate the green world around them.

Richey believes there's as much botanical richness in urban settings as national parks, if you just take the time to notice and learn.

Scout's honor.

The Secret

Souper Jenny Underground Supper Club

If it's not behind an unmarked door, down a secret passageway, or straight from a deep-throated source, you're not interested.

So you'll be on a mission to check out Souper Jenny's brand new Underground

Supper Club (shhh).

First, the deets we can spill. Five chefs, five courses, one location. Twenty-six guests selected by Jenny Levison herself, positioned around a table handcrafted by a local artist (whose identity we're tight-lipped about). If chosen, expect full disclosure within 24 hours of the party.

Two clues worth mentioning: The first supper on September 27 involves H<sub>2</sub>O and a Mediterranean theme. You don't need to be a supersleuth to attend, but table manners and convo skills are a bonus.

Assuming you know when to keep your mouth shut.

Souper Jenny, 56 East Andrews Drive Northwest, West Buckhead (404-237-7687). For more information or to get on the invite list, go to souperjennyatl.com or e-mail souperjennys@aol.com.

Meanwhile, Back at the Ranch

The Grange Public House Opens

You've wet your whistle at the best taverns in town. And have the Zingo tabs to prove it.

This weekend, the local Comer brood breathes new life into the Dublin pub concept with The Grange Public House.

The name harks back to Ireland's oldest community hubs, but the setting is anything but dark and stormy. Light hardwood floors, pale walls, and a sunny front patio make for a bright and inviting spot.

Pub grub includes the usual suspects (fish and chips, shepherd's pie), but certain items run jigs around tradition (try saying "mini tofu burger with whole-grain mustard and relish and Guinness-spiced brisket, please!" in a heavy brogue).

And for the record, the Comers know from a proper pint. High gravity and craft beers, spirits, and a hefty wine menu merit a trip of their own.

Lucky you.
