Five Secret Supper Clubs

by Dana Hazels Seith

5 Holeman and Finch

Velvet-Roped Cattle

At 10 p.m. every night, in-the-know carnivores bum rush H&F's kitchen for a chance to experience one of the 24 exclusively crafted cheeseburgers of this popular eatery, served daily. Yes, only 24 are served every day on homemade buns with homemade ketchup and mustard. See you there tonight.

In Five Words:

Burgers, coke floats, oh my!

Don't Miss:

The skillet mussels and the smoked brussel sprouts.

Did You Know:

H&F hosts private events every Sunday night available for booking.

2277 Peachtree Road, Ste. B, Atlanta | 404.948.1175

6 Diesel Filling Station

Edgy VaHi hangout where anything goes

Converted from a gas station — a seemingly common trend — Diesel Filling station attracts the hard-core, tattooed crowd (as well as those who wish they were) with neighborhood bar fun, bold drinks (Catdaddy Moonshine kamikaze) and a skillful menu.

In Five Words:

Hipster hangout with guaranteed fun.

Don't Miss:

7 C&S Seafood & Oyster Bar

A Euro-New York Experience in Vinings

A favorite of many Atlantans since 2007, C&S not only offers some of the best seafood dishes in the city, but the old New York meets sweet Parisian ambiance is just as engaging.

In Five Words:

Order the Parmesan Encrusted Flounder.

Don't Miss:

The Passion Fruit Mousse and send thanks to the dessert gods.

Did You Know:

Thursdays offer $1 Blue Pointes and $3 Pints

3240 Cobb Pkwy., Atlanta | 770.272.0999

8 Yeah! Burger

Shaun Doty Does It Again

Celebrated chef Shaun Doty is joining the burger boom with his own boutique joint dedicated to the most served dish in America. However, his will include grass-fed beef, free of antibiotics and served on a gluten-free bun.

In Five Words:

Atlanta's first organic burger joint.

Don't Miss:

The burger, of course.

Did You Know:

The first Yeah! Burger replaces the old West Egg and the second location will be in VA Highlands.

1 PRELUDE TO STAPLEHOUSE

Question: How do you create a food frenzy long before your projected restaurant even opens its doors? The answer (if you're Ryan and Jen Hiding): Invite complete strangers into your home and serve several courses. These intimate Sunday suppers showcase Ryan's culinary prowess in eager anticipation of their Staplehouse restaurant opening.

2 SOUPER JENNY

Ever-changing locations and chefs, and run more like a grown-up version of Clue than a supper club ... well, that's Jenny Levison's version. The Buckhead fixture Souper Jenny takes a quirky approach with past dinners including Richard Blais cooking in Oakland Cemetery and Linton Hopkins whipping up courses at a park complete with a duck pond.

3 BLACK TIE BARBECUE

One tip — don't let the Black Tie Barbecue name throw you. No black ties are required, and generally 'cue isn't even served at these secret suppers. Mostly centered around occasions like Valentine's Day and Cinco de Mayo — the one slated for July 4 is already generating a lengthy list of attendees.

4 OUTSTANDING IN THE FIELD

This one's not much of a secret, but good luck getting a seat. The Santa Cruz, California outfitter's "Outstanding in the Field" plans food and farm events throughout the country. Douglasville's Love is Love Farm plays host to the next Atlanta-area feast in October where you can literally pig out in the middle of a farm field.

5 ROGUE APRON

Lady Rogue is the name everyone's been so tight-lipped about. This shrouded-in-secrecy master of ceremonies is loaded with non-disclosure. But, then again, we even don't know who this fair lady is ... It could all be a culinary myth. We're just saying.
